Codes of Military and Martial Law - 1629

IG History

"The Inspector General must have a horse allowed him and some Soldiers to attend him and all the rest commanded to obey and assist, or else the service will suffer; for he is but one man and must correct many, and therefore he cannot be beloved. And he must ride from one garrison to another to see the Soldiers do not outrage or scathe the country…" (Codes of Military and Martial Law, 1629)

Lord Robert Baden-Powell, founder of the World Scout Movement, began his career as a Lieutenant in the British 13th Hussars in India. In his army career, he Lieutenant General and Inspector General o later serve as the Regiment's Colonel.

Early Inspectors General France

IG History

The term "Martinet", commonly used to describe someone overly diligent in enforcing discipline, comes from a French Inspector General of Infantry, LTC Jean Martinet, who served during the reign of Louis XIV in the 1670s.

Among other duties, it was the inspector's task to discover passe volants, or individuals who filled the ranks on the day of inspection in order to fool inspectors. Punishment for passe volants included branding; flogging; and, eventually, execution. Captains hiring them were cashiered and imprisoned.

Frederick the Great

From

Instructions for his Generals

IG History

"Inasmuch as one individual cannot supervise all of these details of regimental service I have appointed an inspector to look after each unit. These officers are responsible for the execution of instructions issued to the troops. They also are the instrument whereby equality of discipline is attained, so that one man is treated as another without undue mildness or severity. The inspectors report to me regarding the conduct of the officers, bring those to my attention who, through bad behavior, negligence, and stupidity are courting dismissal, and recommend those who have earned distinction through their industry or talent. They inspect the regiments frequently, have them drill, improve their shortcomings, and hold reviews if governmental duties prevent my traveling in the province myself. And finally, they preside over muster days and see to it that the cantons will not be deceived by the captains, which in former days happened only too often."

Jay Luvaas, Frederick the Great on the Art of War, (New York: Free Press, 1966), 79.
